

The Future of Personal Mobility Starts Here

On January 18, 2020, Xinda International Corp. entered into an asset purchase agreement with Tribal Rides, Inc., a private U.S. based company, to acquire the designs and Intellectual Property for a digital transportation ecosystem designed for taxi companies, limousine companies, ridesharing service providers and the introduction of self-driving cars.

"We are very pleased with the finalization of this transaction and look forward to moving our company deep into this disruptive and growing market," stated Tribal Rides, Inc., CEO Joseph Grimes.

According to Tribal Rides, Inc., the software platform currently in design and development will provide customers with comprehensive mobility capabilities and service providers a range of functions that include customer booking, accounts management, driver tracking, real-time notifications, auto dispatching algorithms, accounting and settlements, corporate account management as well as providing reporting and analytics.

"This is an exciting time in the digital transportation space and the emerging "connected car" market, where we have just scratched the surface of opportunities and growth," added Grimes
